

Lucky Girl

A dark haze is wrapped around your childhood
Whatever you befell was obviously not good
With sweet sixteen you left all you ever had Except your memories which were not so glad
Left in the lurch from the whole wide world you came
You're a fighter in that game without a blame
Nothing is like it shines
The life has his own planes

You're a lucky girl – and I just wonder why
That angels like you have no wings
Breathless from all that bad – I don't understand
How you always stand up without fear

Something grew in you from a one night stand
Could be handicapped from the drugs of your accident
On the other hand there's a possibility
That you'll never be a mom again - it could be
There's no end in view - it continuous instead
The kindergarten friend died on a blood-clot in his head
Sexual harassment by an old tomato picker boss
A blank account from the creditcard that you have lost

You're a lucky girl – and I just wonder why
That angels like you have no wings
Breathless from all that bad – I don't understand
How you always stand up without fear

How deep a person has to fall in a hole to come back on top
There are situations where no decision is right
She broke out but not down...

You're a lucky girl – and I just wonder why
That angels like you have no wings
Breathless from all that bad – I don't understand
How you always stand up without fear

Without fear

Without fear
